

Winter Workplace Injuries

As the temperature drops, workplace injuries rise. Cold winter weather presents a number of challenges that put workers at risk of injury. As a result, many New Yorkers find themselves in need of workers' compensation. These are a few of the most common winter workers' compensation claims we deal with during these months.

Common Winter Workers' Compensation Claims

Slip and Falls

Winter leaves our walkways covered in ice and sometimes snow, making paths very slippery. When workers slip and fall outdoors, they can find themselves with serious injuries.

Repetitive Motion

Cold weather makes our muscles less flexible and more susceptible to injury and strain from overuse. If you have to grip tools or other objects frequently at work, you may be more prone to repetitive stress injuries.

Frostbite

For those who work outdoors, frostbite is a serious winter work hazard. It can cause permanent damage if not treated. Keep an eye out for cold skin, numbness, and stiff joints.

Auto Accidents

For those who operate vehicles for business purposes, the winter months can be tricky. With more snow and ice on the roads, workers are more prone to experiencing auto accidents.

If you experience an on-the-job injury this winter, don't hesitate to reach out to our office. We are here to help ensure that your paperwork is filed on time and that you receive the compensation that you are entitled to for your injuries and time spent out of work.
