Workers' Compensation is a
No-Fault Based System

Benefits

Have you recently been hurt on the job?

In New York State, workers who are hurt at work have the right to pursue workers' compensation benefits. This compensation system provides injured workers with benefits to cover lost wages and medical care.

What many workers don't realize is that workers' compensation is a no-fault based system.

How does a no-fault system benefit you?

If you get hurt on the job due to anything that you can be held accountable for - whether it's due to personal negligence or fault, you can still apply for workers' compensation benefits.

This means that you don't need to prove that anyone did anything wrong. Through workers' compensation, you are entitled to receive workers' compensation benefits regardless of fault.

If you have been hurt on the job and you're looking to file a workers' compensation claim, our attorneys are here to help. Our attorneys are experienced in claims for construction site injuries, repetitive motion or stress injuries, occupational illness or disease, joint injuries, and lifting injuries.
