

PYRROS & SERRES LLP

How to Deal with Workers' Compensation Investigators

When you file for a workers' compensation case, your insurance company may hire a private investigator to surveil your activities to see if your claim is legitimate. Unfortunately, this is a common practice for insurance companies.

Even when you have a valid injury an insurance company will likely use video surveillance to see if you are exaggerating or lying about your injuries or your activities. Since these investigators can sometimes be invasive and even cross the line, it's important that you know your rights and that you are properly represented in court. This will help ensure that you receive the compensation and medical care that you are entitled to for your injuries received on-the-job.

We've handled bully investigators before. Watch our video below to learn more:

Every case is different. Some of the things that happen during a workers' compensation case may not be fair. That's why you need proper and competent legal representation to represent your case under the law.

If you have any questions about your case, call us! This is what our firm does every day. Learn more about our practice and our attorneys on our website. You can also call 718-626-7730 directly to reach our office for legal assistance.

Sincerly, The Attorneys and Staff at Pyrros & Serres, LLP