What To Do After You've Had An Auto Accident

Auto accidents can be emotionally and physically stressful. However, educating yourself on what to do in an emergency will help ensure that you are prepared. In the unfortunate event you find yourself involved in an auto accident, these are the steps that you should take.

Steps to Take Following an Auto Accident:

Call the Police

If there is significant damage, or you are injured, it's important that you contact the police and file a report.

Exchange Information

Exchange information with the other parties involved. Write down their names, numbers, addresses, drivers' license numbers, license plate numbers, and basic insurance information. If there are passengers, you should get their information as well.

Take Pictures

Take photographs of the damage to your vehicle and the other vehicle. You can use your cell phone camera.

Talk to Your Insurance Company

It is important that you promptly let your insurance company know that you have been in an auto accident. Let them know what happened, as well as the extent of your injuries. This will help make sure that your medical expenses and auto damage is covered later on.

Document Your Treatment

Keep track of any doctors that you receive treatment from following your accident. Keeping these details on record will help ensure that your medical expenses are covered.

If you have recently been injured in an auto accident, our experienced attorneys will help you get the benefits that you are entitled to. If you have any questions about your auto accident, contact our office.
