The Attorneys at Pyrros & Serres LLP Discuss Social Security Disability

When Can You File Your Social Security Disability Benefits Claim?

Social Security disability benefits help protect people who can't work due to a medical condition. Studies show that the 20-year old worker has a 1-in-4 chance of becoming disabled before reaching full retirement age!

Fortunately, Social Security disability is there to help us when we need it most. If you or a family member meets the earnings requirement, it's important to take advantage of the benefits that you are entitled to.

When should you apply?

You have to be out of work for 5-6 months with the expectation that you will be out of work for at least 12 consecutive months in order to qualify for Social Security disability benefits. If you have been out of work for 5-6 months already, we recommend applying for Social Security disability benefits now.

What Information Do You Need?

Your Social Security Number
Your Birth or Baptismal Certificate
Treating Physicians Information
Dates of All Treatment
Medication Information
Medical Records
Laboratory and Test Results
Complete Work History
